(and the same with a "table" tag) I have tried different combinations in both texts, but nothing works. A: You can remove all headers by first eliminating all lines beginning with a whitespace character. `sed -n '/^[ \t]$/d'` This can be extended to cover lines beginning with tabs as well, by starting the sed command with `awk -v RS='[ \t]' '{sub(/^\S*[ \t]+ /, ""); print}'` When extended to cover tabs, you should make sure your awk implementation supports `\t` as the word separator (which it does, if you're running GNU Awk). Otherwise, you should change `RS="\t"` to `RS="\\t"`. (Note: This method has the advantage of not having to use an explicit range, and won't remove the "table" row if it's the first line of the file.) Using your example file, this returns: `coco [0] firefox`

No, do not try to go above 9%! You only need 4% overpassing, to get your R2 triggered. But your power is a bit low! I would say 10watt at 20vdc. If you are using a lower wattage and the voltage is a bit high, have you considered a different board? That approach does what it says in the manual: You can increase the work of the most "overworked" wheel in the power supply. Your problem that you change the "overwork" of the most overworked wheel is in the right track. So, let's repeat: Only one "overworked wheel" will be at risk. If your goal is to increase the damage of the wheels, make sure you have enough power to simply kill the remaining wheel. If your goal is to let them damaged by 10% each, you can only allow 2 wheels to be at risk. If you have less than 4%, you can have 3 wheels at risk. If you have more than 4%, you can have 4 wheels at risk. If you have 5 or more, you'll be ok. If you have 9 or more, you'll be ok. So, if you are using a 5v 9watt power supply, you'll be ok. But, as you can see, there is a limit to the problem: You need to increase the voltage (power) of your power supply. These are my thoughts and observations... Long-Term Brain Breakfast Breakfast For the "Healthiest Way to Start the Day" and "Best Cold-Brews" categories, we tallied up the median breakfast scores of all the local restaurants that participated in the Healthy Eating Challenge. More Info: It's early. You are hungry. Maybe you even woke up at 5am to get an early start, but all you can find to eat is the cereal that's sitting there and you don't have any milk. That's why most people have to have a snack in the middle of the day. Snacking is a good thing. A small snack will not make you gain weight. However, if you are constantly snacking, you can end up with a problem that can become a serious problem. Your taste buds become desensitized and you will have cravings
